2023 Annual Celebration of the Humanities

Wednesday, November 8, 2023 • 5:00 pm

In person & livestreamed by NHPBS from The Palace Theatre, Manchester

Typically, family stories are passed down by word of mouth, from one generation to the next, with some variation depending on the storyteller. Ultimately, they give us identity and help frame our place in the world. Likewise, stories are the backbone of our communities. New Hampshire author Jodi Picoult will share the importance of storytelling at a time when our communities are at a crossroads as we wrestle with banned books, and question whose stories are told while others are missing entirely from New Hampshire's narrative. Please support our communities by investing in a culture of listening, understanding, and connection, through stories.
