

Championing Education and Culture: David Parker's Enduring Legacy

Another way to give to the humanities and inspire teachers, students, and communities across New Hampshire

David Parker, a name synonymous with educational innovation in New Hampshire, has profoundly shaped the region's landscape for students with learning differences. Through Parker Education, he has cultivated dynamic and diverse learning environments. As a lifelong learner himself, David understands the transformative power of arts and culture, not just as a means of personal enrichment, but as a pathway to connecting with others.

What many may not realize is the depth of David's philanthropic commitment to his community— particularly his steadfast commitment to New Hampshire Humanities (NHH). "I love what NHH does," David shares, "especially the Jere Daniell Teacher Fellowships, which help public school teachers create innovative humanities projects. I'm inspired by their work, bringing history and civics to life through experiential learning. Programs like these show students they have value and that their contributions matter. That's why I'm proud to support NHH through my donor-advised fund (DAF)."

New Hampshire Humanities has long welcomed contributions from DAFs— flexible charitable giving accounts that allow donors to contribute assets, receive an immediate tax deduction, and recommend grants to qualified charities over time. DAFs offer a powerful way to manage charitable giving without the administrative complexities of a private foundation.

David Parker stands with two favorite pieces from his art collection.

We are excited to announce that supporting New Hampshire Humanities through your DAF just got easier— simply visit our giving page, initiate your donation, and when you reach the payment section, select DAFpay. With thousands of DAF sponsors integrated into the database, you will likely find yours with ease. If not, a quick entry will begin the process, and DAFpay will handle the rest. Make YOUR lasting impact on the humanities in New Hampshire with just a few clicks! 🌈
