FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

January 5 marked the 250th anniversary of New Hampshire's first state constitution, also the first constitution created by what would become the 13 American states. Preceding the Declaration of Independence by six months, New Hampshire's constitution cautiously takes on the mantle of self-rule after the royal governor fled the colony the previous summer. As a relative newcomer to the state, I recognize the "revolutionary" nature of this 'first' constitution but am also struck by the document's conciliatory tone.

Writing the 1776 State Constitution, the Congress of New Hampshire still expressed their desire for a peaceful resolution with Britain: "...we shall rejoice if such a reconciliation between us and our parent State can be affected..." How distant from the fiery rhetoric associated with the coming Declaration. Historians in the NHH community can explain why New Hampshire's representatives chose this wording but, for us non-historians, I appreciate the reminder that what now seems inevitable, the successful creation of a new nation and the STATE of New Hampshire, must have looked like madness to many in the Winter of 1776.

In 2026, New Hampshire Humanities invites you to explore questions like "What did it really mean to commit to a revolutionary OR loyalist stance 250 years ago?" and "How does our understanding of this key moment in US history help us approach the world we inhabit today?" As you'll read in this issue of Engage starting on the next page, 46 communities in all 10 counties will join us to ask these and other questions as part of our US@250 series. This "Big Watch" in partnership with NHPBS supplies each community with a mini screening of the new documentary The American Revolution and a discussion lead by an NHH facilitator. Most of these locations will also recognize this historic anniversary by hosting supporting programs that continue their community's dialogue. Find a program near you or join us at statewide events including our program kick-off in partnership with the Hampton Falls Free Library on Wednesday, March 18 and our conversation with director Ken Burns as he explores "The American Idea" on Tuesday, June 9 in Concord (see below) in partnership with NHPBS and the NH Historical Society.

Despite uncertainty and reductions in 2025, your support allowed us to develop this unique programming for towns large and small across New Hampshire. US@250 themes will also appear in our Connections book discussion programs, as well as our ongoing Humanities to Go series (pages 6-7). I'll look forward to seeing and hearing from all of you throughout the Semiquincentennial!

Announcing the Big Watch!

Film screenings & discussions and many events around the state!

Join us to mark the 250th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence with more than 80 community-driven programs across the state! In each location below, we'll watch a short excerpt from THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, the new film by Ken Burns, Sarah Botstein, and David Schmidt. Focusing on an excerpt called "The Spirit of Service," each event includes a facilitated discussion on "remembering together": the moments that shape who we are, where we're headed, and the stories that define your own community. In addition to the screening & discussion events listed below, host organizations will also offer a related community event (see page 4). Come watch, reflect, and be part of the conversation!

From Overseas Classrooms to the Kimball Library: Kay Galloway's Passion for the Humanities

For 13 years and counting, Kay Galloway has been a proud supporter of New Hampshire Humanities, and her dedication is rooted in a lifelong love of the humanities. That journey began with a history degree from UMass Amherst and continued through a remarkable career with the Department of Defense Education Activity teaching the children of Americans posted overseas.

Most of Kay's years instructing were spent in Europe, where she taught – and later served as principal – in places rich with the very history she loved. Living abroad allowed her to fully immerse herself in European history, a passion she eagerly shared with her students. She brought those lessons to life by visiting historic sites with them. "Imagine taking high school students to the Acropolis," she recalls. "What a great way to learn!"

Kay Galloway (R) with Kimball Library Director Karen Brown (L)

Nineteen years ago, Kay retired to Atkinson – and quickly fell in love with what she calls "the best small library in New Hampshire: the Kimball Library." As a former trustee and now co-president of the Friends of the Kimball Library, Kay sees firsthand how New Hampshire Humanities' Humanities to Go programs bring learning to life for her community, just as she did for her students years ago. "Thank you, New Hampshire Humanities!" she says – an enthusiastic tribute to the organization that helps bring history, ideas, and conversation to the place she calls home.

If you value lifelong learning, join Kay by making a gift today that brings programs that inspire curiosity, conversation, and connection to the Granite State. For a confidential conversation about ways of giving to New Hampshire Humanities, contact Sarah Chaffee, Director of Development, at schaffee@nhhumanities.org or (603) 224-4071, ext. 113.
